“ Oh you adorable little man. I can never understand how someone could look at a baby and not feel love or feel wanting to protect them. My heart breaks for you to have a mother that loves you so little and loves another man so much, that she's willing to get rid of you, her blood. I would have given you a family. I would have given you love and happiness. Then your mom would have gotten her freedom and you would not have had to die for it. I know how it feels to have a parent that doesn't love you and doesn't want you. Mine has me all screwed up in the head about myself. I don't have anything to do with her anymore and haven't in a few years. I was told that she was popping pills trying to abort me while she was pregnant for me, but she said she didn't. If she didn't I wish she would have and if she did, I wish it would have worked. See, you got saved because you're with Jesus now. And that's the best place to be.

“ My beautiful nephew... you will always be remembered as the sweetest little boy who had a smile that made the room glow and everyone around you feel the innocence and peace that you radiated. I remember the day you were born... the nurses in the hospital nicknamed you “angel Axel” because your disposition was calm and loving, from the very start. You were such an “easy” baby, just very chill and happy with whatever was going on around you. You brought such joy to this world and even though your time was cut way, way, way too short you will forever leave a footprint in our hearts. You were born an angel, and you were called back to serve your purpose as just that- an angel. Angel Axel. We will remember you always as you reside in the house of the Lord. I love you buddy. Love, Aunt Lindsay

“ As the mom of a son, I am so sad that this precious little boy's life was cut so short, by someone who should have gone to great lengths to see that he was happy, safe and loved to the moon and back. So very sorry for this family's loss, God Bless Axel and all of you.
